In Congress, Yesterday.

The House decided, after a sharp struggle, to close the California debate on the first Tuesday in June. That is a long way off, but better then than never.

In SENATE, the Deficiency bill received the finishing touches, and was fully passed. We presume it is by this time a law.

The Census bill then came up, and Mr. Vinton's important amendments, giving the act a perpetual efficacy, and fixing the number of Members of the House of Representatives at two hundred and thirty-three, were both agreed to. The Senate voted to adhere to its own Statistical Tables, so the bill goes back to the House; but it will probably pass to-day.

Proposed Southern Organ.

We have not deemed it incumbent on us to print the preliminary Prospectus of the proposed Southern Organ at the Metropolis, which is to be devoted to Slavery and nothing else. Perhaps the managers will wish to advertise it with us. We heartily agree with them that good will result from the establishment of an undisguisedly, exclusively Pro-Slavery Organ at Washington. As they say, if an Anti-Slavery journal can be well supported there, one of the antagonist order ought to be. The existing journals do not answer the purpose-they think too much of their platforms and parties. Not being politicians themselves, the authors of this Organic movement can't tolerate partieanship in their journals. All they care for is security for the "sixteen hundred millions' worth of negro property" involved in and threatened by the present agitations. So Slavery wants an Organ, and by all means should have it. We have no doubt it will be established, and effect a world of good. The signers of the Address well say :

good. The signers of the Address well say:

"As yet the South has taken no steps to appear and plead at the bar of the world, before which she has been summoned, and by which she has been tried already without a hearing. Secured by Constitutional guaranties, and independent of all the world, so far as its domestic institutions are concerned, the South has reposed under the conciousness of right and independence, and forborne to plead at a bar which she knew had no jurisdiction over this particular subject. In this we have been theoretically right, but practically we have made a great mistake." made a great mistake Yes, 'you may bet your life on it.' It was a great mistake not to attempt to justify Slavery to an impartial world; but a still greater not to attempt to justify it to yourselves. It is but a year or two since in the chief intellectual assemblage or reunion in Charleston, S. C., an incidental discussion arose touching the naked economy of Slavery, entirely regardless of its moral or ethical bearings. A more thorough discussion at the next meeting was proposed and agreed to. The time arrived, and so did the three or four adversaries of Slavery-none of them Abolitionists, and all Southern men or connected with Slave-holding interests. Not one other of the hundred or so who usually attended these meetings made his appearance that evening! So the three or four officers sat a while, took their supper. and then their leave; and no discussion on the tabooed theme has ever since been held there. Yet Slavery now proposes to hold up her right hand and plead at the bar of Public Opinion. That is a step in the right path and we rejoice at it.

-We subjoin, as a matter of record, the have united in the Address in behalf of this especial champion of Slavery:

The Express has ventured to publish Eugene Sue's 'Address' on accepting the Socialist nomination for Representative of Paris, and buries it under a column of commentary, replote with misapprehension and misstatement. No matter: we are thankful for the insertion of the Address on any terms. On M. Sue's remark that "the Republic and Universal Suffrage are above the caprice of majorities"-meaning simply that two men cannot vote another into perpetual slavery or vassalage-

The Express thus expatiates: "Reduce a theory like that to practise in the City of Now-York—abandon the abstraction for the reality—and if our errects did not run as red with blood, on declion dry, as do those of Paris, then there is a wider difference between American and French human name than we could ever be persuaded to believe."

Of course, this is a no such thing. No street of Paris ever ran red with blood on an Election Day -and we venture to say that more blood has been shed at Elections in this country than in France. The Express is fooling its readers, and ought to be

District Representation.

The People of Ohio, of Indiana, of Michigan, of Virginia, of Maryland, of New-Hampshire, and we believe of some other States, are soon to hold Conventions for the revision of their several State Constitutions -that of Ohio being already chosen and about to assemble. In each of them, we doubt not, a decided progress toward the complete acknowledgment and practical concession of the Right of Man to Self-Government will be made, though probably more in Virginia than elsewhere, because that State has hitherto been the most misgoverned and aristocratic in its institutions of any in the Union, South Carolina possibly excepted. We presume that in all the Election of Judges will be confided directly to the People, and in Virginia the popular election of Governor also, though not without a desperate struggle. We hope moreover to see the absurd restrictions on the freedom of Elections which prescribe that a Governor, Judge, Senator or Representative must be so old, have lived so long in the State, (in some cases) own so much property, and (in New-Hampshire) profess a particular religion, swept entirely out of existence. There is no reason in them, and no good results from them. It may be very proper, as a general rule, that a Legislator shall have attained a mature age and lived some years in the State; but the constituencies understand all this quite as well as the constitution-makers, and can do what is right without being put in strait jackets. Experience shows that they are more likely to err on the side of distrust of youth or unacquaintance than on that of precipitate confidence. There are few Constitutions that might not be profitably shortened by the omission of needless inhibitions. But the Reform which seems to us more desirable than any other, is that which shall give every Senator and Representative henceforth a separate constituency, by which he shall be chosen, to which he shall be immediately responsible. There is no other change proposed so fraught with universal good as this. We thought so before our own State tried it, and therefore urged the experiment, and, now that she has tried, we know it. There is no device of man so fatal to the trade of party wire-workers and political gamblers as this. Let a party have a pretty certain majority in a County which chooses three or more Legislators, and its ticket is almost certain to be made up in part of poor material. Ambitious wealth buys places on it by hiring the services of hungry Activity ; profligate Activity secures nominations by packing delegations and then buying and selling votes. Whichever party is morally certain to carry its ticket is nearly certain to have a heavy load of it; for men who would not dare to run alone may contrive to shuffle on in a crowd, and obtain the votes of thousands, where not so many hundreds really desire their success. But they are on the ticket, and regular nominations must be supported-and they are.

If, then, the People of the States about to revise their Constitutions will resolve that each legislator or other functionary to be chosen henceforth shall be chosen from a separate or Single District, in other words, that there shall be as many Districts as Members-they will do very much to reduce political intrigue and management within the parrewest limits and restore to themselves and their posterity that just and proper control over the choice of their own law-makers whereof party machinery and 'usages' have too long well nigh deprived them. Every locality, every interest, every sentiment, may hope to find expression under the Single District system as it cannot under the irregular and bungling fashion hitherto generally prevalent. Reforms are at first local and feeble; they are often crushed and smothered beneath the weight of gigantic constituencies, whereof the left hand knoweth not what the right hand doeth. Then the juggles, the bargaining, the partiality and injustice displayed in districting, by buying up and overruling a doubtful county with one of decided party bias, such as we see has wasted a good part of the Session of the Pennsylvania Legislature, and called forth one Veto from the Governor-there is no effectual cure for these but in the Single District system. No other is half so fair to all parties, enabling them to exhibit their strength clearly in the results of all elections. Thus in our own State last Fall. when each party polled just about 200,000 votes, each under the Single District system chose an equal number (80) legislators-one party baving one more than half in the Senate, and the other a like ascendancy in the House. Formerly, a party polling fiveninths of the popular vote has repeatedly failed to carry the Legislature; henceforth we believe that is morally impossible. A Single District system, with some device to secure fair and equal Apportionments, is of all others the Reform we deem most important to be carried in the States about to revise their Constitutions, and we exhort Republicans of whatever name or sect in the several Conventions to labor for it with earnest and unsleeping resolution.

[Since the above has been waiting a place in type, the Obio Convention has met, and Michigan has chosen bers, but we let it stand as originally written.]

In taking leave of our friends it is proper that we should say that our confidence in President Taylor is unimpaired, and that the sentiment which has induced us to devote the volunteer services of years in his cause remains as ardent and as unalloyed as when we first took the field in his behalf. In taking leave of our friends, personal and political—many of them connected with us by the memories of twenty years of common struggles and vicissitudes—we cannot omit to commend our successor to their kindest regards and their warmest faver. We know that Mr. Hall is entitled to their confidence and esteem. He has ever been, like ourselves, a warm, earnest, and unfaltering advocate of Whio principles, Whio measures, and Whio men.
